

Human Molecular Genetics

Prof. Horstmann

Faculty of Biological Sciences & Bioengineering

École Internationale Polytechnique (EIPG)

Synthetic Stingray

Written by Prof. HORSTMANN

Saturday, 18 November 2017 16:25 - Last Updated Saturday, 18 November 2017 16:41

By using a synthetic stingray, researchers have developed a new type of artificial stingray that can be used for biomedical engineering. The synthetic stingray is made of a transparent, flat, diamond-shaped structure with a central, elongated, pointed tail-like structure. The central structure is colored orange and yellow, and has several thin, branching structures extending from it. The entire structure is mounted on a white surface.